

BUILD RESPONSIBLY: SOURCE FOREST PRODUCTS CERTIFIED TO THE SFI STANDARD

THE FUTURE OF OUR FORESTS STARTS WITH SFI

Wood's inherent properties – as a sustainable, natural, and renewable resource – make it an excellent environmental choice for any new construction or renovation. As the largest single forest certification standard in the world, the Sustainable Forestry Initiative® (SFI) program is well-positioned to meet the growing demand for certified products.

Many of wood's positive attributes depend in part on whether the forest resource is renewed. Third party-forest certification standards like the Sustainable Forestry Initiative offer a proof point that the forest has been managed for multiple environmental, social and economic values – today and into the future.

Architects and builders choose wood because it looks great, has numerous environmental characteristics – including renewability – and is easy to work with.

More and more buyers – including governments, businesses and individuals – are asking for wood products from responsible sources. Products certified to SFI are recognized by many leading green building rating programs, such as these, around the world:
