

WOOD IS GOOD FOR GREEN BUILDING

Wood is a renewable, durable resource

Using wood products from responsibly managed forests in green building is key to keeping forests as forests

Forests provide many benefits, including clean air and water, habitat for wildlife, commercially valuable products like wood, and employment for local communities

Third-party forest certification standards, like SFI, are a proof point that wood comes from responsibly managed forests that have been managed for multiple environmental, social and economic values – today and into the future
